Pluto tv free live tv and movies

With so many streaming services to choose from, watching which TV shows, movies and channels are available where it can be overwhelming, if not impossible. And even if popular services like Netflix, Hulu, or Amazon arouse your interest, they can also leave a massive dent in your wallet, especially if you plan to subscribe to more than one. Pluto TV is not Netflix or Hulu, however. Looking for a movie? Freemium service combines live TV with on-demand content that could interest many subscribers. Be the source of all content for WatchFree Vizio, but also offers an enticing collection of over 250 channels and thousands of free movies and shows at a low, low price absolutely nothing (except a few ads). Best of all, the service only got better because it started rubbing elbows with major network broadcasters. Let's dive deeper. What is Pluto TV? Owned by Viacom as of last year, and unrelated to a small small planet that could, Pluto TV is a live-TV streaming service, not quite unlike Sling TV and competitors like DirecTV Now and Hulu+ Live TV. But unlike these services, which offer streaming access to channels that you'd find on cable TV, Pluto TV offers free content mainly curated from what's already available online. In this way, it's similar to Rabbit TV, though at no associated cost. Pluto TV began in 2013 and picked up steam fairly quickly. The service has had more than 28 million active users since November, the largest free TV streaming service in the U.S. That number can only grow as Pluto nears launch in Latin America, the first recipients being Brazil by the end of the year. With Pluto TV, you'll find content from channels that you know as well as some you've probably never heard of. Even those who already subscribe to the live TV streaming service may find it useful thanks to its curated layout, although it will depend on your personal preferences. In March, Pluto shook things up with a user interface overhaul that streamlined the entire process for content retrieval and playback. The main theme of navigation is linearity. The service allows you to jump into some of its main categories of live TV - sports, movies, news, entertainment, etc. - with just one or two clicks. This philosophy applies to video-on-demand AI, which offers more playful categories like rom coms while maintaining the traditional TV guide spirit. In October, Pluto TV added four new channels, including CMT Equal Play, Bob Ross Channel, Design Network, and a channel dedicated to one of Netflix's most popular shows, Narcos. In addition, you will now be able to enter your favorite channels, saving you from having to bounce through its 250-plus channel list. You can also save individual shows, clips, and movies from more than 100,000 hours of unique programming to your Watchlist. When you finally decide what you're watching, you can also access the preview bar, which shows more for example, for example, directors and trailers. How is Pluto TV different from Vizio WatchFree? Basically, WatchFree is a Pluto TV - it's only included on Vizio TVs after they eject from the box, and it works a little differently than the app does on other devices. WatchFree appears as input on Vizio TVs, similar to your cable box, streaming device like Roku or Apple TV, or game console. All the programming you find on WatchFree is the same as on Pluto because it's a melting pot of content that controls it. In addition to the name and a few Vizio-specific differences in the interface, most of what you read here also applies to WatchFree. Which channels are available? You can expect to chew through the contents of the library's free service quickly. Still, there's plenty to explore on Pluto, especially with more than 175 content partners on board providing entertainment across 250-plus channels. When viewed through Pluto TV guide, the channels are divided into groups of similarities. You will find some relatively standard categories such as news, sports, movies, entertainment and comedy. Others are more internet-friendly than chill out, life + style, and geek + game sections. For most, you won't find standard TV channels, although some are represented through their web counterparts, especially news outlets. These include well-known names like Bloomberg, Cheddar, CNBC, MSNBC, CBSN, and many others. From 2019, that includes CNN, though not the full, live CNN you get on cable. Instead, CNN's channel includes a curated playlist of short-form digital content from CNN anchors and reporters. The best clips are focused on lifestyle and culture, climate change, the environment, and original CNN investigations and interviews. A similar channel for NBC called NBC News Now came in February. Other recent additions to Pluto include CMT, Kevin Hart's Laugh Out Loud, and Red Bull TV, plus a handful of new thesis channels in Celebrity, Reality, and Lives, the perfect cocktail for pop culture and reality TV enthusiasts. Sports coverage is less conventional - you won't find the likes of ESPN here. Instead, you'll find options like Fight, World Poker Tour, Impact Wrestling, a dedicated sports news network, Glory Kickboxing and the Big Sky Network. DAZN recently signed an agreement to provide the original weekly series on Pluto TV, and there is potential for this partnership to expand on the track. Pluto recently added an official PGA Tour channel with 24/7 coverage of one of golf's biggest tournaments. There are reruns of reality and documentary shows along with episodes of Dennis The Menace, Thunderbirds, and other older TV shows in the Entertainment section. Among these different channels, you'll also find Wipeout, a network that only displays reruns of popular game shows and various iterations from different countries, as well as Nosey, which shows reruns of the Jerry Springer Show and The Maury Show, among others. Meanwhile, curiosity section features TV, Docu TV, Xive TV, and even a NASA livestream. New additions include Pluto TV Sitcoms, which offers a selection of older comedies such as The Third Rock from the Sun and The Lucy Show, and a Spanish-language channel called Pluto TV Cine. This type of hyper-focused network is par for the course with Pluto TV, which also includes Anime All Day and Stand Up, a channel dedicated to stand-up comedy. Similar channels include Slow TV, which shows relaxing images, Pluto TV Travel, and Cats 24/7, which is pretty self-explanatory. Check back during notable seasons like Christmas, and you'll likely see new temporary channels or festive explosions of holiday-themed content to enjoy, which is all the more reason to check back on what's new. Several Internet radio stations are also available via Dash Radio, which is available as a stand-alone service. Modern genres such as hip-hop, electronic music and pop are the most common, although stations are also available that offer classic rock, soul and jazz. Recently, Pluto has also tried to ramp up its international presence. In the first year of its UK operation, the service adds two British-specific channels to its lineup, including a permanent 24/7 Made in Britain lineup that broadcasts British-centric films and shows. On the other is the Brit-pocalypse, a temporary themed channel that highlights the apocalypse and destruction of films in the British environment. In August, Pluto TV launched its Latin America free streaming service in 17 countries, with plans to expand to Brazil before the end of the year. In the same month, Pluto TV added additional content from CBS, as well as a dozen new channels including Dabl, Johnny Carson TV, Demand Africa, Three Company, Rifleman, Loupe, Classic TV Comedy, Classic TV Drama, Western TV, Pluto TV Fantastic, Pluto TV Love Stories, and Pluto TV Suspense. In addition, recently pared down the interface into 15 different categories including: Movies Entertainment Best News + Opinion Reality Crime Comedy Classic TV Home + DIY Explore Sports Games + Anime Music Latino Kids What devices can I use to watch? Chances are almost 100% that you own at least one device capable of streaming Pluto TV. The service can be streamed through a web browser and offers desktop applications for both Windows and MacOS. However, they can only be used in mobile apps in the U.S., which are also available for iOS and Android devices with separate U.S. and international versions that offer different channels due to problems with streaming rights. If you'd rather watch it on your TV, several devices including Roku, Apple TV, Amazon Fire TV, Chromecast, Android TV devices, and PlayStation 4 offer Pluto TV apps. Smart TVs from Samsung, Sony and Vizio are also supported, with the company's website saying more are on the way. Not all Pluto TV channels are available on all platforms, however. All the apps we tested show interface without significant differences between platforms, except for the application to which we get below. what what content on demand? Pluto TV's on-demand offering has some TV shows, especially from TLC and discovery channel, but the vast majority of what you'll find are movies. Available content changes frequently, with the service promising new movies every week. Rotating selection is hard to predict what's available, and it's not on par with services like Netflix or Amazon Prime in every stretch. The company has been pulling in bigger currencies recently, including a distribution deal with Sony that saw Starship Troopers come to Pluto TV. Lately, we've seen blockbusters like The Terminator, as well as a deep collection of Bond movies, including from Russia With Love and GoldenEye. Overall, Pluto doesn't match Netflix's vast expanse of cinematic perfection. Yet there are enough notable titles to catch your attention, and you can find a hidden gem among the fringe offerings. On-demand content may not be available on every platform, or at least not all may not be available. In our testing, both shows and movies were available on demand through most of the platforms we tested, including Amazon Fire TV, Apple TV, iOS and Roku. This list once excluded the PlayStation 4, but recent updates have brought the gaming platform to the fold. Will Pluto TV stick around? At least at the time of writing this writing, it doesn't seem like Pluto TV is going anywhere. Unlike previous projects designed to provide shows that would otherwise need an antenna for, like Aereo, Pluto TV is not treading on any flows that could irk either government agencies or pay tv companies. For free though it may be, Pluto TV sells advertising on every channel, judging by our experience. Advertisers seem to be buying. With the Viacom team significantly increasing the platform's marketing efforts, we expect even more interest among advertisers. Pluto TV's deal with Vizio to power the WatchFree service is now looking like the first of many, as Viacom begins to pitch Pluto TV's free offerings as an ideal way for cable and satellite companies to capture some of the viewers that are losing out from the cable-cutting trend. There's also some concern that Viacom's recent merger with CBS may affect the future of Pluto TV, especially when it comes to customer-facing monetization. While we're confident of seeing some changes, Viacom CEO Bob Bakish confirmed last year that Pluto TV will remain a free service, per Cordcutters News. He even dropped a bit of a corporate strategy, saying he would use Pluto TV to upsell premium options such as CBS All Access. At the beginning of going on, it seems Viacom is throwing its weight behind Pluto TV as promised. The company spent $30 million in the first quarter of 2020 to promote a new user interface, and appears to pick up more prominent advertisers across all of its channels. Those thinking about potential monetization shouldn't sweat just yet, but it's worth noting Viacom hasn't exactly decided against such a future, whether near or far. It's Pluto for you the right thing? The easiest way to find out is to download one of the applications on your platform of choice or head to the company's website and follow up for a while. It won't cost anything but your time, and given the breadth of programming, the chances are fairly good that you'll find something you like. Just keep in mind you won't see any of the latest content found on other networks.
